

Morning Walks

President Truman was a walker— a fast walker. In fact his pace was so fast that some newsmen could not keep up with him. Young, athletic reporters were assigned to cover the president on his daily walks of a pace of 120 steps per minute. The president sometimes walked for several miles.

When he and Mrs. Truman moved back to Independence, President Truman especially enjoyed visiting with his friends and neighbors during his daily walks.

Imagine you were taking a walk with President Truman, conduct an interview and write your conversation below

